London. N. W.
18th July 1884.

Dear Mrs Klaus,

After more than one attempt on my own part to deliver the enclosed, and more than one on the part of a trusty messenger whom I have employed, I am obliged to give it up, as, according to the last news obtained by my messenger at the Embassy, the Marquis has been transferred to the Spanish Legation at Paris. No doubt if a letter were sent in the ordinary course through the post to the Embassy here, it would be duly forwarded to the Marquis wherever he might be; but your instructions are so ex-explicit as to putting the letter into his own hands that I do not venture to do anything else with it, - except return it. If I can be of further use in the matter I shall be pleased.

Yours always very sincerely,

H Buxton Forman
